A Lighthouse Keeper's Dilemma

In 1860 Bateman Williams, my great, great grandfather, was a happy man. His application for the Assistant Lighthouse Keeper position at Cape Hatteras had been accepted. From now on he would have a steady, dependable income and he and his family would be provided quarters at the Lighthouse. No longer would he have to compete for piloting jobs. With so many more men becoming pilots, work was sporadic as well as dangerous. few jobs on the Outer Banks paid cash and now he had one of them.

The Pamlico Sound and the Atlantic Ocean insulated the people on the Outer Banks of North Carolina. Most lived off the land - fishing, gardening, and hunting. Storms provided shipwrecks and other bounty to be scavenged from the beaches. The people subsisted but they needed cash for items such as salt, sugar, coffee, tea and manufactured items.

As a pilot, Bateman understood the dangers facing ships passing the dangerous shoals off the coast of Cape Hatteras. The Diamond Shoals earned its name as the Graveyard of the Atlantic by sending over 500 ships to the bottom. So the position with the U.S. Lighthouse Service gave the 38 year old Bateman financial stability for his family of eight and also served a very worthwhile cause.

But 1861 brought troubling times. Fort Sumpter had fallen. North Carolina's neighbors, Virginia and South Carolina had already seceded from the Union.

Although the South had a very long coast line, the Union decided to block all of its ports from Virginia to Louisiana. The resulting lack of materiel should hamper the South's war effort. The federal blockade proved to be very effective. As a defense against the blockade, Virginia and South Carolina had extinguished its coastal lights.

North Carolina had deeded the land for the Cape Hatteras Lighthouse to the federal government. After acquiring the land, the federal government paid for the construction of the facility. The U.S. Lighthouse Service hired the keepers and paid their salaries. Thus there is no question that the Lighthouse was a federal facility. Governor Ellis of North Carolina wanted the State to secede. He realized the critical role lighthouses could play in defense of the Union blockade plans. (There was no questions as to where Ellis' sympathy lay. For example, on 15 April 1861 Ellis had rebuked a request from the Union to put down the rebellion in South Carolina.) On 17 April 1861, Ellis sent telegrams to the head lighthouse keepers.

The body of the telegram read:

*You will use the most active measures for the defense of the post under your command. Extinguish all harbor and other lights.*¹

The head keeper at Cape Hatteras, Ben Fulcher, received one of these telegrams. Ben Fulcher, an owner of slaves, quickly complied with the request. He had inherited the slaves along with 500 acres from his father. Most of the other residents on the Outer Banks were too poor to own slaves.²

Clearly, this was an illegal order, as the Governor had no authority over the lighthouse. The order to extinguish the light came in April 1861; North Carolina did not secede from the Union until 20 May 1861. So under these circumstances, what would a new employee do? Following this order meant putting ships and lives at risk. To refuse would certainly mean the loss of his cherished position. He did what I believe most of us would have done. He followed the orders of his direct supervisor and the governor of the State. There is no record of his involvement in taking the lenses from the Cape Hatteras Light, but documents indicate he participated in the removal of the Roanoke Light.

The Union quickly realized the importance of the light houses. Within a few months, Cape Hatteras was back under federal control. A law firm headed by Lincoln's former secretary of state set out to prosecute those who were involved in snuffing out the light. Apparently the Union did not judge Bateman too harshly. The light was restored quickly and Bateman kept his position until 1865. The Head Keeper, Ben Fulcher never returned to lighthouse service.

There were many in the North who wanted to punish all who were involved in the rebellion, regardless of the extent of his involvement. Given that his termination coincides with the end of the War, Bateman probably fell under this umbrella. He died on 13 January 1866.³

DESCENDANTS OF EMANUEL KYZER AND MARY (POLLY) OSWALT KYZER

by: Betty Jean Weaver

While researching the ancestors of David and Redama WEAVER KYZER (article published in Roots and Branches issue October 2007). I wondered what their descendants looked like. I have not been able to find a picture on either David or Redama; the only thing I have is a picture of their tombstones. I do have a collection of pictures on a number of their children, their grandchildren (not only on my line; but so many of the other lines). I did not take the time to compile pictures for the other children of David and Redama and their descendants. I hope to do this in the near future) so I started putting together the pictures on each family of my direct lines, this is what I was able to compile.

Emanuel KYZER, was born 4 February 1823, near Lexington, South Carolina. he died 9 November 1903 in Tuscaloosa County, Alabama. He is buried in Enterprise Baptist Church cemetery. Emanuel married Mary (Polly) OSWALT on 6 June 1842 in Tuscaloosa County, Alabama. She died 30 July 1874 in Alabama. She is buried off Hwy 171 in Northport, Tuscaloosa County, Alabama.

She is the daughter of Michael OSWALT, Jr. and Susannah WEAVER.

Emanuel and Mary (Polly) OSWALT KYZER had twelve (12) children: seven (7) daughters and five (5) sons. I am a great, great grand-daughter of Emanuel KYZER and Mary (Polly) WEAVER KYZER. Emanuel KYZER was the eldest child of David and Redama (WEAVER) KYZER. He came to Alabama with the family from Saluda County, South Carolina between November 1824 and March 1826. He married Mary (Polly) OSWALT 6 January 1842. They had twelve (12) children, nine of whom lived to adulthood. Two known home places of Emanuel and Mary (Polly) are the Brownville and the Big Hurricane communities, both in Tuscaloosa County, Alabama. Mary, who died 30 July 1874, is buried in the KYZER family cemetery on the Brownville home site. Two or three of the children who died before adulthood (Mary Jane, Margaret Redamia, and William David) are probably buried at the same site with their Mother. Only the grave marker of the mother remains standing at this date. The Brownville home site and cemetery is located just off Alabama Hwy 171, about one (1) mile West of Alabama Highway 43. The family home place in the Big Hurricane community is now incorporated into Brookwood, Tuscaloosa County, Alabama. The family livelihood came from farming and a mill on Hurricane Creek operated by Emanuel. The mill was operated as a grain mill and sawmill. Emanuel milled the lumber to build the Hurricane Creek covered bridge, which stood until it was burned in 1962. He helped in its construction along with the help of his sons and men of the community. Traditional sources say the site of the mill, and probably the home place, was called "KYZER'S POND". Emanuel KYZER was also a gunsmith, and made his own gun which is now kept by his great, great granddaughter Martha RAYE SPRINGER KILGORE, daughter of Lena Pearl KYZER SPRINGER. According to Silas KYZER, Emanuel fought in the Civil War and used this gun.

1. Mary Jane KYZER was born 1 October 1842 in Alabama, died in infancy on 7 November 1843 in Alabama and was buried in the KYZER Cemetery, Bibb County, Alabama.

2. Margarite Redama KYZER was born 15 February 1844 in Alabama; died 26 August 1856 in Alabama at the age of 12; and presumed buried in KYZER Cemetery, Bibb County, Alabama. There is a possibility she is buried off Highway 171, Northport, Tuscaloosa County, Alabama. Margarite Redama must have been named after her paternal grandmother Redama WEAVER KYZER.

3. Susannah Elizabeth (Susan) KYZER was born 29 October 1845 in Tuscaloosa County, Alabama; died 17 December 1891 in Tuscaloosa County, Alabama at the age of 46; and was buried in the Big Hurricane Church Cemetery, Brookwood, Tuscaloosa County, Alabama. Susannah Elizabeth married (1) John William WEAVER on 5 June 1864 at the residence of her parents, Emanuel and Mary (Polly) OSWALT KYZER in Tuscaloosa County, Alabama. John William was born 2 February 1832 in Tuscaloosa County, Alabama; and died before 5 July 1870 or they were divorced. The latest information was that he died in the Civil War and was buried in Tennessee. He was the son of Jesse and Rebecca SANFORD WEAVER.

Susannah Elizabeth and William (Billy) Henry HOUSE had three (3) children; two (2) sons and one (1) daughter. Susannah was possibly named after her maternal grandmother Susannah WEAVER OSWALT. I do not know where the name Elizabeth came from.

5. Larrah Ann KYZER was born 30 June 1849 in Tuscaloosa County, Alabama died 18 March 1937 at the age of 87 and was buried in the SNIDER/SCALES Cemetery, Cottondale, Tuscaloosa County, Alabama.
